Many of the memorials laid before the Throne by the Censors are filled with charmingly frank denunciations of abuses but somehow these documents seem to be regarded as matters-of-course, and it is doubtful whether they have the effect most people would suppose they should produce. We may fairly hope that the opinions put forth by the Press will have greater weight and obtain more publicity.

It must not be supposed, however, that the Sin-pao is pro-foreign in its tandencies. It is ominently nationalistic, and believes that to the want of ability and honesty among the officials more than to any pational defect the weakness of the Empire is due. Mr. Scott is of opinion, however, that the ratio of increase in the use of Persian opium for the last two years, will not be maintained; on the contrary, he believes that a decrease will take place. In fact, Mr. Scott attributes the consumption of Persian opium in his district entirely to its cheapness as compared with the Indian drug. The proportion of Persian opium to Malwa, when the two are used together, is, we are told, about one or one and a half parts to five. In Kinkiang the well-to-do still smake

> - CONTRACTOR OF COLUMN TO THE PROPERTY OF THE RANGOON.

It may not be generally known that there exist in Rangoon, among the Chinese population, those of whose silent working the outside world has no idea whatever, although its effect on the Chinese themselves is observable in various ways connected with their social and political existence. As a race, the Chinese are very clamsish and of gregarious habits, living together and forming themselves into communities wherever they go, and among whatsoever people their lot is cast, with a view to mutual help and protection. In Burms, setting aside for the present their tribal distinctions and taking their nationality as a whole, the Chinese are divided into two greatclasses, viz., the Hokiens or Chinchows and the Macaes: the former, comprising the merchants, petty tradesmen and shopkeepers, beatmen and gardeners, belong, for the most part, to a society called the Topekhong; and the latter, under which are ranged nearly all the artisan classes and handicraftsmen we have in Burms, such * as carnenters. blacksmiths, jewellers, shoemakers, and tailors, are almost to a man membors of the Ghee Hin Society. Retween the Hokiens and the Macos there exists a traditional batred, a deadly equity, which has grown with their growth and become a sentiment in their breast: it is a sort of a warfare to the knife that they have sworn against each other, to be revoked only on the utter extermination of one or theother of them. It is true that at one time or another an apparent reconciliation was effected between the two hostile factions by pressure being brought to bear on the chiefs by the local authorities-I am speaking of what took place in the Straits-yet the peace thus patched ip was only transient and illusory; the fire lay smouldering in the ashes only to burst Hence a Chinaman is ever on the alert and does not feel himself safe or secure unless he is located among his own confratornity. We thus behold in Rangoon the Hokiens eshablishing themselves almost in a continuous line along the business part of the Strand Road and forming a compact body, militart as it were, among their tribesmen and brethren of the secret alliance; from Messrs. Pinthong and Friend's store, as far as the Commissariat Wharf, the flags and streamers of the Topehkongs wave proudly in the breeze. In like manner the Macaos group themseles together along Dalhousie-street, beginning rods and ending with the shoomskers, and restaurateurs in the proximity of the Iron Bazaar the secret symbol of the Ghee Hin brotherhood. hidden under some allegorical sign-boards or emblematic paper hangings, proclaims to the brethren of the graft that they are safe under the protecting magis of the great confederation. At present everything seems quiet enough not a sign betokens the existence of the formidable rivairy between the two classes, nothing seems to indicate the presence of a deadly antagouism between them; but let eventualities arise and something happen to furnish them with a pretext for a casus belli, then will these Secret Societies be seen in their demon-like aspect, and then only will the people and the authorities come to know the terrible power of mischief that is now lying dormant in them. In a moment whole streets would be converted into d battle ground and the hitherto peaceful occupants of Some papers lately received from the Press stalls, shops, and bazanrs, metamorphosed into

The tine should not have sharp corners.

When it is desired to forward letters to the United States by a sailing ship which is not notified as carrying a mail, it is only necessary to post the letters in the ordinary way, marked with the name of the ship, and prepaid 8 cents per half ounce as usual. This Office then undertakes the duty of obtaining notice of departure and despatching the correspondence. It is requested that the letters be posted if possible at least one day before the date fixed for sailing.

Many boxes of letters are received at the Post Office not sealed, that is to say, the box is fastened with sealing wax, but there is no impression of a scul. The attention of boxholders is called to the necessity of carefully sealing such boxes with some recognisable seal, and of sending a chit. book or receipt with them. The omission of the latter precaution leaves a doubt as to whe. ther the contents of the box ever reached the Post Office: the omission of the former, as to whether part of them might not have been abstracted for the sake of the Postage Stamps.

Correspondence for the West Indies (except those belonging to the Postal Union, the Bahamas, and Hayti), for Monte Video and Paraguay can no longer be sent via San Francisco.

PERSEVERANCE. The Chinese have a capital illustration of the power of perseverance. One of their countrymen, who had been making strennous Kinng Ping efforts to acquire literary information, discouraged by difficulties, as last gave up his book in despair. As he returned to manuel employment he saw a woman rubbing a crowbar on a stone. On inquiring the reason, she replied that she was in want of a needle, and thought she would rub down the crowbar till she got it small enough. Her patience provoked him to make another trial, and he succeeded in obtaining the rank of the first three in the empire.
